Chip was walking through ^{the} street. ^{The} Man, who was also walking there noticed the Chip. The man liked the dog and try to pick Chip up. Chip didn't know this man, he didn't want to go with this man. After unsuccessful attempts, the man stopped and decided to buy good food dog. The man bought sausages and gave them to Chip. Chip was surprised, but ate all ^{the} sausages. ^{The} Dog started to trust this friendly man. The man began feeding the dog every day and soon took him home. Chip felt strange in the house, he wasn't used to living like this, he ate on schedule, the man played with him, caressed him and love. For the owner, chip became a favorite pet, his outlet and keeper of comfort.

The owner of the chip turned out to be a cyclist and decided to invent a bicycle to train with his friend.

And he succeeded, he invented a bicycle with a seat for his pet on the back, they started riding it around the city, and then they organized competitions where people participated in races with their pets. Chip became an ambassador of this competition.

Like this a random meeting can return to a good future and faithful friendship. Now, Chip and his owner are successful businessmen. They sell things for dogs, cats and they also sell those ^{same} ~~the~~ bicycles.
